HAVEMEYER'S ADMISSION.

Mr. Havemeyer made a red-letter re mark, so to speak, when he said that "the mother of all trusts is the customs tariff

It will not be forgotten soon. There was a wonderful timeliness about it. It comes when trusts are uppermost in the thoughts of the people; when New Jersey and some other States are chartering them by the score; when the companies are putting out their inflated stock by the million, and when prudent business-men are dreading the effect upon the country when a day of reckoning

Mr. Havemeyer's admission is timely, also, in that it comes when politicians forms which will be proposed in the na-Democratic party will make a vigorou utterance upon the subject we do not doubt. But what will the Republicans say and do? Will they adopt the language of Mr. Havemeyer? Mr. Hanna has promised that they will declare against trusts, but are they willing to acknowledge the undoubted fact to which Mr. Havemeyer has drawn the attention of the country? No, indeed. The Republican party is a trust party, and it will do nothing to hurt trusts. They may indulge in platitudinous expressions of hostility to them, but they will do nothing

It may be that Mr. Havemeyer has sounded an alarm which will become the turning point in the next presidential campaign. Remember that the masses are alarmed and indignant at the growth of the trusts. Remember, also, that the newspapers frequently contain items of news showing that most of our manufaturers can undersell foreign competitors Yes; we are claiming that by reason of the superior machinery which we hav no other factories and mills can com pete with ours. Yet the American peopl are forced to pay much higher prices than those prevailing abroad! How is that? Why, Mr. Havemeyer has told you. The protective tariff shuts out foreign competition, and the trusts kill off domestic competition.

We know, of course, that there ar some trusts which are not aided by the tariff. We can think of several that probably would be able to run with as much success under a low tariff as under a high tariff, but they are exceptions.

Others before Mr. Havemeyer discov ered that trusts were fostered by the protective tariff; but they could not get the hearing that he is having. What he has said is in all men's mouths to-day. What the New York Herald calls hi "brutal frankness," and the fact that he is the manager of a great trust (which has no great opposition from the Arbuckres), have aroused the public, as it has never been aroused before.

Well, what are the American people "going to do about it"? That remains to be seen. The Democratic party may be counted upon to fight the trusts, but what of the Republicans? They may, and doubtless will, adopt an anti-trus platform next year, but can they be re lied upon to antagonize great concerns some of which have been their larges contributors? In our opinion they canno be. The most of the trusts have always stood by the Republican party, and the Republican party is going to stand by them. And, therefore, so much the more reason why the Republicans should be hurled from power headlong.

----DIVORCE IN RICHMOND.

The New York Mail and Express, in a recent editorial on the subject of divorce cases and the publicity given them, discusses certain remarks which are alleged to have been made by Judge Minor, of the Law and Equity Court of this city Our contemporary states that Judge Minor is reported to have forbidden the Clerk of his court to give the new hapers | cidedly sulphurous, any information concerning divorce cases instituted or disposed of in his tribunal. The Mail and Express deprecates this stand and insists that the Judge, if he thinks publicity multiplies divorce suits, is very much mistaken. It argues that secrecy in such matters would foster rather than suppress the practice, and points. that newspaper publications tend to check the evil rather than encourage it.

As a matter of fact, Judge Minor's dews have been misquoted, and the Rich-

Law and Equity Court has greatly increased within the last few years, and that the Judge thinks the results of these cases should not be published. While he has no ground to complain of the news papers for going into details about such cases, he would prefer to see no mentio made of them. The Judge finds that four fifths of the divorce bills considered by class, are certainly not sensitive to the such proceedings. In fact, when they se the announcement of decrees for divorce they hardly realize that the matter involves anything which need be kept se cret. The publication-at least, according to Judge Minor's views-suggests a similar step on the part of the reader, who often infers that a release from matrimo nial bonds may be had almost for the Judge Minor, of course, has not forbidden the newspapers to publish the results of divorce proceedings, though he has intructed the Clerk not to furnish reporters with such data unless they seek it. The information may still be had for the ask-

It must be conceded that Judge Minor' opportunities for seeing the wisdom of his position are exceptionally good. While the peculiar conditions existing here may justify his opinion as to the negroes, we at least agree with the Mail and Express that publicity in such matters is a forcible check on the more self-respecting class of white citizens. And then, too, no one ould accuse the Richmond papers of sen ationalism in this direction

The subject of divorce legislation and the best means for preventing recklessness in administering the laws are now attracting wide attention. This is well videnced by the fact that since the editorial in the Mail and Express Judge Minor has received many letters on the subject

----The London "Punch" suggests that since Madame Bernhardt has made so conspicuous a success as Hamlet, Sir Henry Irving should join forces with her and appear as Ophelia. We heartily concur in this suggestion, and we feel sure that the great Englishman could not do more to make the tragedy ridiculous than the "divine Sara" and her blonde wig have done. It might be well, too, to introduce Maude Adams, who has recently proved herself a sensational Juliet. Th inflammatory moon which caught fire during the love scene at a recent performance of Romeo and Juliet, should likewise have a place among the stage properties, and Richard Mansfield's celebrated Cyrano de Bergerae nose might also be run in to advantage.

MANASSAS, VA., June 16 .- (Special.) -As the sun disappeared behind the Blue Ridge yesterday evening the ninth annual exhibition of the Upperville Colt and Horse Club passed into history as the most successful show ever held at Grafton Hall. There were about 380 entries, the largest number ever recorded at any show in the State, which brought out an immense crowd to see one of the best exhibitions of horseflesh ever witnessed in the South. Much credit is due to Colonel R. H. Dulaney. The colts and heavy-draught horses were exceptionally good, Mr. A. Both were arrested here this afternoon while endeavoring to leave town aboard a Bay-Line steamer bound for Baltimore. It was only after a hard struggle for liberty that they consented to accompany the detectives to police head-quarters. One of them made a dash through the steamer, knocking down a dozen negro deck-hands, who attempted to stop him. As he leaped a high picket-fence at the end of the wharf, Detective Childress fired at him, but missed. Childress then turned his attention to the other man. While chasing this one he encountered the first fugitive, but ran after his second man and captured him. The latter jumped out of the patrol-wagon. He sprained his ankle badly, but the toils. Both were arrested here this after his second man and captured him. The latter jumped out of the patrolwagon. He sprained his ankle badly, but continued running until intercepted by Samuel Childress, a son of the Detective. At the station-house the men gave their names as Frank Morris and Charles Williams, of the Eastern Shore of Maryland. A shoe-box they carried was found to contain the $470 worth of stamps said to have been stolen from the Maryland post-office.
